Green IT Welcomes New Application Support Manager

PHILADELPHIA, Pennsylvania - Green IT Energy Applications is thrilled to welcome Ruby Khan to its team as an Application Support Manager. Ruby's responsibilities will include application QA to support software engineering efforts, end-user engagement, cyber security audit, and project management.

Ruby brings to Green IT over nine years of information technology experience, having led risk analysis, software development, and security initiatives for a number of large financial institutions. At the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, Ruby helped resolve security violations and deploy major security features based on workflows she helped develop.

A native of Atlantic City, NJ, Ruby has lived in the Philadelphia area for 4 years. She is currently working toward a Master's in Information Security at Temple University's Fox School of Business.

"I'm excited to be part of an organization that is so committed to sustainability," says Ruby. "I am looking forward to applying my cybersecurity expertise to software that supports the mission of the renewable energy industry."

Green IT CEO Andrew Eisenberg comments, "Ruby's combination of SDLC and cybersecurity expertise is a stellar complement to the Green IT team. Strong relationships with our customers are fundamental to how Green IT does business; we're confident Ruby's boundless energy and commitment to excellence will help us better serve our end users."
